Analysis:

ESSA requires a writing component for the accountability assessments. Unless the US Department of Education believes SAT never needed “with Essay” (which is not MDE’s understanding), Michigan will need either to continue to administer the SAT with Essay or else add some other writing component, an additional test as was done when the ACT was used as the 11th grade assessment.

If passed, this should be understood to have no impact unless the federal law also changes.

Impact on Department Operations:

If SAT with Essay continues under federal requirements: no impact. If the essay portion is removed: no significant change to Department operations, somewhat shorter testing time at local schools, federal funding threatened.

Specific Concerns:

Eliminating the state requirement does not eliminate the federal requirement. Removing the writing component from the MME would weaken our case to receive full peer review approval from USED for use of the SAT as our 11th grade accountability assessment. Passing peer review is a condition of federal funding. USED already has concerns about the extent to which SAT satisfies the ESSA requirements.

Fiscal Impact (Department, State, and Local):

Threat to federal funding, as ESSA requires a writing component for accountability assessments.
