The GRPM Community Access to Collections improvement project will benefit K-12 schools, postsecondary students, teachers, colleges, and researchers. The project will create a new two-story main entrance to the CARC with a reception area, kitchen, meeting spaces, artifact labs, and restrooms on two levels, all with easy access to adjacent collections storage (for a total of 5,182 square feet of new community space). The public space will be available for training, teaching, research, meetings, and events. The first floor will feature a large open lobby with south facing windows and a reception area, where the public can enter without appointment and be greeted by a GRPM staff member who will provide assistance. There will also be a state-of-the-art artifact lab where students or community groups can interact with collections. The space is estimated to host 4,000 K-12 students, 1,000 researchers and college students as well as 50 community groups annually.
