Fire suppression systems in the Menominee industrial park were designed based on a city water tank that was decommissioned around 2014. The existing system in the industrial park were designed with a much higher static and residual water pressure than what currently exists following the decommissioning. This water infrastructure project can correct the issue for the industrial park without creating any deficiency of pressure in nearby residential areas. The funding will ensure the safety of the community in and around the industrial park and aligns with the state's interest in ensuring public safety.
