This initiative is dedicated to transforming kidney care and CKD prevention across the state. Bringing together partners and setting up a statewide advisory committee, the Mo Hood III Initiative is focused on working with the provider community, collecting and analyzing critical data, education community members, and raising awareness of CKD. Data indicates over 33% of Michigan residents are at risk for developing CKD due to high blood pressure, diabetes, or obesity. CKD costs the state $3.9B annually with the average Medicaid treatment cost for a CKD patient at $22,860. This is over 6 times the cost for the average non-CKD annual patient of $3511. Currently, more than 16,000 Michigan residents are on dialysis with another 2000 awaiting a kidney transplant.
