The statewide network of school-based health centers plays a significant role in delivering both physical and behavioral health services to students. SCHAMi's school-based health clinic members (SBHCs) are more important than ever as they respond to student healthcare needs in this post-Covid era. Legislative support and leadership in the FY25 budget process resulted in new investment in the adolescent health center network allowing new centers to open in unserved and underserved counties. However, despite the gains in expanding the SBHC network the past 2 years, there are still over 25 counties without at least 1 adolescent health center. This is why we're requesting your support for additional investment in expanding these sites. SCHAMi member health clinics are partnered with local FQHCs and local health systems and staffed with physicians assistants, nurse practitioners, psychologists, masters-level social workers, and other licensed healthcare professionals. These clinics meet the need by delivering vital physical and behavioral healthcare services directly where students are located—in their schools. These clinics allow students to stay in the classroom, increase learning outcomes, and help address the growing crisis of childhood anxiety, depression, and suicide, among other important healthcare care episodes.
